WEATHER OF CONCERN

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

- A strong storm system will bring periods of rain and gusty winds through Saturday, with showers, small hail, and lowering snow levels Sunday and Monday. Drier weather will return by Tuesday. Cold air remains in the Surprise Valley area, in Eastern Modoc County, and is expected to continue into Friday night. A mild Pacific storm will be moving into the forecast area with a possibility of freezing rain. If temperatures remain cold enough, an ice storm could impact the area.
- Snow and wind may result in widespread avalanche activity in the mountains, with increased danger from Friday night into Tuesday morning.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

- A significant storm will bring heavy rain and mountain snow with possibly damaging winds to the area tonight through Saturday.
 - Cooler temperatures are expected with this storm through next week. Lingering showers are likely Sunday through Tuesday.
- Winter Storm Warning has been issued for Inyo County from late tonight through Sunday morning.
- Winter Storm Watch has been issued for Ventura County Mountains and Los Angeles County Mountains excluding the Santa Monica Range from late this evening through Sunday afternoon.
